A review of the evidence is given and A review of the evidence is given and shows there to have been at the time and before the killing, a heated and determined strife between the deceased and his slayer about the title and possession of a mining about the title and possession of a mining property in Fergus county, at which the killing occurred. The mine, called the Florence, is about two miles from Maiden. Burgess took possession of it Sept. 9, 1887. O'Brien and his partner claimed the mine. and conspired to oust Burgess, and in the William Slover, one of the attacking party

William Slover, one of the attacking party, in his evidence for the prosecution said that the arrangement made on the evening of Sept. 9, was that he, Byrnes and McGrath should go to the Florence mine early on the morning of the 10th and get as near the mine as possible. Lackey and Dennis O'Brien were to come up about 9 or 10 o'clock and get near the door. Lackey was to get into the cabin and hold up Burgess, and when they did that the others were to take possession of the mine. Pursuant to agreement six men were at the appointed place armed with Winchester rifles. Two men working for Burgess assorting ore on the dump were forced to leave, and O'Brien offered one of them pay if he would leave the ground and not witness what would happen. This offer was refused and the man, ground and not witness what would happen. This offer was refused and the man, Johnston by name, got into the cabin and informed Burgess of the plot against him, telling him not to show his head outside the cabin. Two pack horses laden with provisions for Burgess were captured by O'Brien and his gang, it being evidently their intention to starve Burgess out if all other means failed. While the men, armed to the teeth, were watching for a chance to shoot, Burgess he fired from his cabin, killing O'Brien.

watching for a chance to shoot, Burgess he fired from his cabin, killing O'Brien.
It is demonstrated as a truth by the testimony of Lackey, Byrnes, McGrath, Slover and Murray, all witnesses for the prosecution and parties to the agreement made the night before that the five men went to the Florence mine on the morning of the 10th armed, to take possession of that property. Taking everything into consideration the governor thought he was justified in issuing the pardon. His action in the matter ing the pardon. His action in the matter will give satisfaction. Burgess has many friends in Montana, all of whom joined in petitioning the governor for his pardon. O'Brien was known as a bad man, one who would scrupie at nothing to accomplish his ends. THE OWENS-GLEASON FIGHT Eleven Rounds Fought When the Refer Declared it a Draw. afternoon attracted nearly 200 admirers of the "manly art." The principals were Tally Owens, of Philipsburg, and Thomas Gleason, late of St. Louis. Duncan Mc-Donald was chosen referee. Before the and Kilrain entertained the crowd with a sparring exhibition, followed by Shepley and Barney Finn. There was no fooling between the combatants, and it was the intention of each to knock his man out. Owens thought he had a waikover, but he found his mistake before many rounds, as deason had mettle in him that surprised Gleason had mettle in him that surprised his admirers, notwithstanding he got the worst of the fight. As the men stepped into the ring, both in excellent form, a smile of confidence crept over their faces. They wore four ounce gloves, and the agreement was that one or the other was to be knocked out in ten rounds, but neither term of the court in 1888 for the killing of Dennis M. O'Brien. The case attracted a great deal of attention, and ever since Burthe second round Owens was awarded first blood. He smashed Gleason's smeller from which the claret flowed freely, and also got to his eye and seemed able ly, and also got to his eye and seemed and to hit Gleason whenever and wherever he wished. In the third round the fighting continued fast and furious, but ended dis-astrously for Owens who landed a terrific blow on Gleason's law with his left, break-ing the knuckle of his second finger. In the fourth round both were puffing and sparring cautiously for wind. For the nith honors were even, Gleason apparently picking up. During the sixth and seventh rounds Gleason began to force matters, and in the eighth he rushed Owens to the ropes, but the eighth he rushed Owens to the ropes, but the round ended by Gleason getting another hard crack on the eyes, which were badly swollen. When they stepped up for the ninth round both of Gleason's eyes were black and nearly closed, but he was plucky and fought hard, but without any effect.

In the tenth round Gleason gave Owens a staggerer on the shoulder which instantly raised a large lump. This round was a pretty lively one. At its close the referee stated that according to agreement the fight was ended, but as there had not been knock down he couldn't decide it, and rdered another round fought. The men ame together again and at the close of the ounds Gleason looked pretty "rocky," t no knock-down was recorded.

The referee said it was evident to all hat Owens had the best of the match, but inder the circumstances he had to declare under the circumstances he had to declare it a draw. The crowd was evidently satisfied with the decision and all agreed that the exhibition was on the "dead square."

Gleason was unable to be around yesterday and it will be several days before his soreness will leave him. Owens bears no facial marks of his encounter. The outcome of this scrap will probably result in the two men meeting again to a finish. The gate receipts were divided, the men receiving upwards of $75 each.

The Wisconsin Central Deal. Boston Special: The negotiations be tween the Northern Pacific and the Wisconsin Central have finally materialized and the plan will probably be adopted: The Wisconsin Central will receive 35 per cent. of its gross earnings, anything saved by operation for less than 65 per cent. to go to the Northern Pacific, and any excess of operating cost over 65 per cent. to be paid by the Northern Pacific. It has cost 64 per cent. of gross earnings to operate the road of late months, and President Oakes, of the Northern Pacific, is confident that this per-centage can be reduced to 60. The Northern Pacific expects to send business aggregating $2,000,000 gross per annum over the Wisconsin Central when the arrangement s perfected and in working order. The Northern Pacific will refuse all other interchange traffic between Minneapolis and Chicago. The officials of the two roads here say that this will give them all the advantages of a consolidation without even a lease being actually made.
